Q: Set dynamically a user input value in html text field using python I'm making a website, and I'm trying to make it so that if I add the 'ad' in the search bar, it will do a search for the value 'ad' in the html text field, and return a list of all of the objects with the value 'ad' in the column[0] and column[1]. I've tried to do this using python 3.4, but nothing seems to work. This is my search page:

import mechanize
import random
from selenium import webdriver from bs4 import BeautifulSoup def main():

    response = mechanize.urlopen("")
    driver = webdriver.Chrome() driver.implicitly_wait(3) driver.get("") searchbar = driver.find_element_by_id('search-bar') searchbar.click()
    searchbar.send_keys('ad')
    rows = table.select('#sample-table-1 tr')
    list = []
    for row in rows:
        row
```
