Abstract:

Haploidentical related donors are alternative stem cell sources for patients without human leukocyte antigen (HLA)-matched related or unrelated donors. Immediate access to the donor, availability for patients with rare haplotypes, ease of stem cell procurement, and lack of a requirement for a physical cord blood bank or an extensive HLA database render this type of hematopoietic stem cell transplantation particularly attractive despite the high histoincompatibility barrier between the recipient and the haploidentical graft. In this review, we answer the following questions: 1) What are the current transplant strategies used to overcome the histoincompatibility barrier in haploidentical stem cell transplantation and their clinical results? 2) How should we choose the donor when there is more than one available haploidentical donor? 3) How does transplantation from haploidentical donors compare to that from umbilical cord blood?

Key Words: Haploidentical stem cell transplantation, HLA, GVHD

Özet:

Tam "human leukocyte antigen" (HLA) uyumlu bağışçı bulunamayan hastalar için bir diğer seçenek yarı-eşlenik akraba bağışçılardan alınacak kök hücrelerdir. Bağışçı ve hasta arasında aşılması gereken yüksek HLA uyumsuzluğuna rağmen, yarı-eşlenik akraba bağışçılarından kan kök hücre nakli (yarı-eşlenik kan kök hücre nakli [YKHN]); bağışçıya anında ulaşılabilirlik, ender görülen haplotipler için uygulanabilirlik, kök hücrelerin elde edilmesindeki kolaylık ve kord kanı bankası/doku bankasından bağımsızlığı dolayısıyla cazip bir yöntemdir. Bu derlemede şu soruları cevaplandıracağız: 1) YKHN'de HLA uyumsuzluk bariyerini aşmak için kullanılan stratejiler ve sonuçları nelerdir? 2) Birden fazla yarı-eşlenik akraba bağışçısının olması durumunda bağışçı nasıl seçilmelidir? 3) YKHN'in korddan kök hücre nakline göre avantaj ve dezavantajları nelerdir?

Anahtar Sözcükler: Haploidentik kök hücre nakli, HLA, Graft Versus Host Hastalığı (GVHD)
