A: That a requirement for the ANS series? If so, you probably have a look at the 2x-3x-DSR-48DX400AT-16NG - "DSR", 3300 series, from top quality. I can find no complaints on the internet about durability or quality. With the recordable manual, all you have to do is look for the page with a stamped mark (anyone know what the code is?) on the title side of the page and it is the page with the disk drive. The DSR series (the top end of it) is very, very robust. They are the favoured drive in the UK seismological community. But it does not have any automatic PLDC and hence no FOV (all you have to do for it is manually focus), and you would be wasting a lot of time taking exposures with the EM-BS. It has a flatbed medium size scanner. There is a DTR-48DX400 which is also a very fast scanner with its own removable black-and-white Ilford Filaboard, which is better than the EA. The drive is only 2.7kg, as small as you can get. BTW, check the entry in google scholar, or other search engine. Let me know if there is anything else I need to know.
